Gooseberry Student 'Tip' of the Week

You may have seen some upsetting details, photos and comments online about the events in London and Manchester. Always talk to a trusted adult if you have questions about anything you see online. Always think about what you are posting online and how it might make people feel. Please share with students.

Gooseberry Teacher 'Thought' of the Week

Supporting your school community through traumatic local, national and global events is an ongoing challenge. Your students are likely to have seen details of the recent events in Manchester and London unfold online. They may have seen upsetting photos or videos in real-time or have read news items or comments from the public or family members posted online. At times like this, children are particularly vulnerable and are likely to be confused. They may have questions, need reassurance or may want to talk about these events. It is likely that your school already has a response in place for supporting your school community. Be one step ahead, be aware of what your students are doing online, what they might have access to and what they are sharing online. Please share with staff.
